D. Factual Background

1. Mr. Campana Invented Wireless Email.

19. Generally, the patents-in-suit relate to an innovative vision by a brilliant inventor, Thomas Campana, to integrate two distinct technologies: electronic mail and wireless networks. Mr. Campana invented unique technologies that enable a user to receive and view an email message from a wireless mobile device, without needing to connect to his wireline personal desktop computer.

20. In 1971, Mr. Campana founded ESA Telecom Systems, a wireless engineering consulting firm, and spent the next 20 years helping companies develop their paging networks. By 1990, Campana was recognized as a trusted provider of advanced wireless solutions in the telecommunications industry. For example, from 1986 to 1991 Campana acted as Vice President of Engineering for Telefind Corporation. At a time when pager networks were local operations more akin to independent, regional radio stations than the giant service providers we have today, Campana was working with Telefind to develop one of the very first national networks capable of transmitting alphanumeric pages anywhere in the country. Telefind's paging technology was so sophisticated and ground breaking that it prompted a number of inquiries regarding potential acquisition by major telecommunications carriers both in the U.S. and abroad.

21. The visionary work of Mr. Campana occurred at a time when digital cellular telephone networks were a relatively new concept. At that time, there were no systems for sending emails to or from mobile devices. In fact, the concept of email itself was still a relatively new concept that only became popularized with the arrival of large online service providers such as America Online.

22. Realizing that email and wireless technologies were ripe for combination, in the summer of 1990, Mr. Campana began to develop a wireless email system that garnered the attention of AT&T. At AT&T's request, Mr. Campana built a working model that specifically interfaced with AT&T's newly designed line of portable computers. Mr. Campana and his employees demonstrated the system to AT&T in October, 1990 and then to AT&T's most valued customers at an industry tradeshow the following month. The demonstration consisted of sending an email through the AT&T email system to a portable AT&T Safari computer capable of sending and receiving emails wirelessly via a modem that had been specially programmed for that purpose. Based on this technology, Mr. Campana filed a series of applications with the PTO that eventually issued as the patents-in-suit.

23. Although Mr. Campana's company eventually failed, Mr. Campana's vanguard technology described and claimed in the patents-in-suit has been adopted worldwide. Moreover, many current industry leaders have recognized the value of the technology and have licensed the patents-in-suit.

2. NTP Won Prior Litigation Involving the Patents-in-Suit.

32. Five of the patents-in-suit were the subject of a widely publicized patent infringement litigation filed in this Court against Research-in-Motion, Ltd. on November 13, 2001, Civil Action No. 3:01CV767 (the "RIM Action").

33. In the course of the RIM Action, RIM extensively litigated the validity and enforceability of the five patents at issue, as well as the issue of RIM's infringement. The issues of infringement and validity were tried in a thirteen-day jury trial in November 2002 before the Honorable James R. Spencer.

34. The jury returned a verdict finding that RIM willfully infringed all of the asserted claims of the patents under theories of direct infringement, induced infringement and contributory infringement by making and selling Blackberry handsets, producing and selling email software, and operating the Blackberry system. The jury also found the inventions of the asserted claims were novel and non-obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art by finding that the claims were not anticipated or rendered obvious under §§ 102 and/or 103 of the Patent Act.

35. The Court awarded enhanced damages and attorney fees to NTP and ordered RIM to pay a 5.7% royalty rate on all sales of the infringing products. The Court also awarded NTP a permanent injunction. A copy of the Court's decision is attached as Exhibit I.

36. RIM unsuccessfully appealed to the United States Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit ("Federal Circuit"), which affirmed the validity of the patents. Infringement of the system and apparatus claims was affirmed for those claims that did not contain an “originating processor” limitation, the construction of which was altered by the Federal Circuit, and infringement of the method claims was reversed because RIM’s “Relay” component was in Canada, not the US. A copy of the Federal Circuit’s opinion is attached as Exhibit J.

37. After losing most of its arguments before the Federal Circuit and threatened by the notion that it would be enjoined from selling its lucrative Blackberry® products, RIM agreed to settle the lawsuit in March 2006 by licensing the right to practice NTP’s cutting edge technology embodied by the claims of five of the patents-in-suit for the licensing fee of $612.5 million dollars.

38. Shortly after the widespread publication of the licensing fee paid by RIM, on September 20, 2006, Oren Tavory filed a Complaint against NTP, Inc., styled Oren Tavory v. NTP, Inc., Civil Action No. 3:06CV628 (E.D. Va.) (the “Tavory Action”) seeking to be named as a co-inventor of seven of the eight Campana Patents at issue here and asserting claims for copyright infringement and unjust enrichment. The action was transferred to the Richmond Division and assigned to the Honorable James R. Spencer, District Judge. The Court dismissed the unjust enrichment claim on December 26, 2006, and granted NTP’s motion for summary judgment dismissing the remaining claims on July 17, 2007. Mr. Tavory filed a notice of appeal on August 16, 2007. In a decision issued on October 27, 2008 (2007 WL 2965048), the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit affirmed the district court’s judgment in favor of NTP.

39. Currently pending before this Court are the following patent infringement actions (“the related actions”) filed by NTP:

- (1) NTP, Inc. v. Palm, Inc. (“Palm”), filed on November 6, 2006 as Civil Action No. 2:06-CV-627 and reassigned on December 20, 2006 as Civil Action No. 3:06-CV-836;

(2) NTP, Inc. v. T-Mobile USA, Inc. (“T-Mobile”), filed on September 7, 2007, Civil Action No. 3:07-CV-548;

(3) NTP, Inc. v. Cellco Partnership d/b/a Verizon Wireless (“Verizon”), filed on September 7, 2007, Civil Action No. 3:07-CV-549;

(4) NTP, Inc. v. AT&T Mobility, LLC (“AT&T”), filed on September 7, 2007, Civil Action No. 3:07-CV-550;

(5) NTP, Inc. v. Sprint Nextel Corp. (“Sprint”), filed on September 7, 2007, Civil Action No. 3:07-CV-551; and

(6) NTP, Inc. v. Alltel Corp. (“Alltel”), filed on May 19, 2008, Civil Action No. 3:08CV299.

40. Seven of the patents at issue here are also at issue in the Palm Action. All the patents at issue here are also at issue in each of the actions filed against T-Mobile, Verizon, AT&T, Sprint, and Alltel.

41. The related actions were stayed pending completion of the PTO reexamination proceedings.

3. 67 Claims Already Confirmed/Allowed After Reexamination.

42. After the jury verdict in the RIM action, the United States Patent and Trademark Office (“PTO”) initiated reexamination of the ’670, ’172, ’451, ’592, ’472 and ’946 Patents in December 2002, and granted RIM’s petitions for reexamination of the ’960 and ’611 Patents in April 2003 and September 2003 respectively. RIM subsequently filed requests for reexamination of the other patents-in-suit.

43. All of the reexaminations eventually were terminated or went to appeal. The Appeals Board has rendered decisions for each of the reexaminations. The Board has confirmed or allowed 567 of NTP's patent claims after reexamination. The following chart summarizes the Board's appeal decisions of the reexaminations of the patents-in-suit:

| Patent No. | Reexam No. | Status | Claims Confirmed/Allowed by the Board |

44. After years of reexamination proceedings, the validity of claims 15, 32, and 34 of the '960 patent, which RIM was found to infringe at trial, have been upheld.

45. NTP has appealed the Board's decisions to the United States Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit, as to all of NTP's patent claims that the Board did not already confirm. The appeal is pending.

E. Defendants' Infringement and Notice Thereof

46. Defendants have been, currently are, and continue to directly and/or indirectly infringe one or more claims of the patents-in-suit by making, using, selling, offering to sell, and/or importing into the United States one or more products and/or services that infringe the patents-in-suit or that are specially adapted for use in infringing products. For example, Defendants (1) make infringing devices that are imported into the Richmond Division, offered for sale and sold to customers in the Richmond Division for use in the Richmond Division; (2) directly market infringing devices to customers, including customers in the Richmond Division, via the Defendants' online Web sites, including, but not limited, to <http://www.shopamerica.htc.com>; (3) knowingly communicate with customers and provide instructions, support and services to customers located in the Richmond Division, through telephone and online contacts for technical support of the infringing use of products and services sold by the Defendants through Defendants' online Web sites, including, but not limited to, www.htc.com, and through a toll-free helpline at 866-449-8358; and (4) conduct marketing, promotion, and advertising activities for infringing products and services within the Richmond Division and elsewhere in the United States, such activities thereby including offers to sell directed at customers in the Richmond Division.

47. The infringing HTC products and services include, by way of example and without limitation, the Verizon HTC Imagio™ smartphone, the AT&T HTC PURE™ smartphone, the AT&T HTC Tilt™ 2 smartphone, the Verizon HTC Ozone™ smartphone, the Verizon HTC Touch Pro2 smartphone, the T-Mobile HTC Touch Pro2 smartphone, the Sprint HTC Snap smartphone, the Verizon HTC Touch Pro™ smartphone, the Sprint HTC Touch Pro™ smartphone, the Sprint HTC Touch Diamond™ smartphone, the Verizon Wireless HTC XV6800 smartphone, the Verizon Wireless HTC XV6900 smartphone, the U.S. Cellular HTC

PPC6800 smartphone, the T-Mobile HTC Wing smartphone, the T-Mobile HTC Dash smartphone, the T-Mobile G1 smartphone, and the Google Nexus One smartphone.

48. Defendants indirectly infringe one or more of the claims of the patents-in-suit by actively inducing others to use, sell, and/or offer for sale products, methods, processes, services and/or systems that directly infringe one or more claims of the patents-in-suit, such as but not limited to the Verizon HTC Imagio™ smartphone, the AT&T HTC PURE™ smartphone, the AT&T HTC Tilt™ 2 smartphone, the Verizon HTC Ozone™ smartphone, the Verizon HTC Touch Pro2 smartphone, the T-Mobile HTC Touch Pro2 smartphone, the Sprint HTC Snap smartphone, the Verizon HTC Touch Pro™ smartphone, the Sprint HTC Touch Pro™ smartphone, the Sprint HTC Touch Diamond™ smartphone, the Verizon Wireless HTC XV6800 smartphone, the Verizon Wireless HTC XV6900 smartphone, the U.S. Cellular HTC PPC6800 smartphone, the T-Mobile HTC Wing smartphone, the T-Mobile HTC Dash smartphone, the T-Mobile G1 smartphone, and the Google Nexus One smartphone.

49. Defendants indirectly infringe one or more of the claims of the patents-in-suit by knowingly making, using, offering to sell, selling or importing into the United States one or more material or especially adapted components of the claimed invention of the patents-in-suit for use in practicing the patented invention. By way of example, upon information and belief, Defendants make, use, sell, offer to sell, and/or import smartphones and application programs specially adapted for use in conjunction with various operating systems, such as the Window Mobile operating system and the Android operating system, such as but not limited to the Verizon HTC Imagio™ smartphone, the AT&T HTC PURE™ smartphone, the AT&T HTC Tilt™ 2 smartphone, the Verizon HTC Ozone™ smartphone, the Verizon HTC Touch Pro2 smartphone, the T-Mobile HTC Touch Pro2 smartphone, the Sprint HTC Snap smartphone, the Verizon HTC Touch Pro™ smartphone, the Sprint HTC Touch Pro™ smartphone, the Sprint HTC Touch Diamond™ smartphone, the Verizon Wireless HTC XV6800 smartphone, the Verizon Wireless HTC XV6900 smartphone, the U.S. Cellular HTC PPC6800 smartphone, the T-Mobile HTC Wing smartphone, the T-Mobile HTC Dash smartphone, the T-Mobile G1 smartphone, and the Google Nexus One smartphone.

50. Upon information and belief, Defendants have continued to infringe the patents-in-suit, despite their knowledge of them and in reckless disregard for NTP's patent rights. On information and belief, Defendants have direct knowledge from press reports and independent investigation of the merits underlying NTP's patent rights from their knowledge of the disposition of NTP's patent infringement suit against RIM. Further, Defendants are aware of the status of the pending reexaminations as such information is publicly available. Defendants are aware that the patents-in-suit are presumed valid and remain enforceable during the pendency of the reexaminations. And, on information and belief, Defendants are aware through published press reports that the reexaminations were instituted because of political pressure on the PTO and are without merit. Despite their knowledge of the disposition of NTP's patent infringement suit against RIM and the fact that RIM took a license to the patents-in-suit, Defendants chose to market and promote their smartphone devices and, in particular, the related Email functionalities in direct competition with RIM BlackBerry devices which were found to infringe upon, and are currently licensed under, the patents-in-suit. On information and belief, Defendants are also aware of the patent infringement suits that NTP filed against T-Mobile, Verizon, and AT&T respectively on September 7, 2007, Civil Action Nos. 3:07CV548-550, which involve the same patents-in-suit as asserted in this Complaint. However, Defendants continue to market, sell, and offer to sell their infringing smartphone devices through these wireless carriers. Defendants' continued infringement with their present knowledge of NTP's patent rights and their relevance to Defendants' operations is reckless and willful.

51. NTP has been irreparably harmed by the Defendants' infringement of its valuable patent rights. Moreover, Defendants' unauthorized, infringing use of NTP's patented systems and methods has threatened the value of this intellectual property because Defendants' conduct results in NTP's loss of its lawful patent rights to exclude others from making, using, selling, offering to sell and/or importing the patented inventions.

52. Defendants' disregard for NTP's property rights similarly threatens NTP's relationships with its licensees and potential licensees of this intellectual property. Defendants will derive a competitive advantage over any of NTP's existing and future licensees from using NTP's patented technology without paying compensation for such use. Accordingly, unless and until Defendants' continued acts of infringement are enjoined, NTP will suffer further irreparable harm for which there is no adequate remedy at law.
